Torii Hunter

Torii Hunter, a graduate of the Pine Bluff, Arkansas, Babe Ruth League and a current player with the Detroit Tigers, is widely considered one of the premier outfielders of all time.

Known to rob hitters with spectacular catches, Hunter is a four-time All-Star. He has taken away many one runs through his career by climbing the fence in the outfield.

Hunter has won nine consecutive Gold Glove Awards as an outfielder and has won a Silver Slugger Award.

When not on the baseball field, Torii is passionate about making a difference in the community through his charity, the Torii Hunter Project. The organization strives to better the lives of at-risk youth.

For giving back to those in need, combined with his on-field prowess, Torii Hunter was awarded the coveted Marvin Miller Man of the Year Award in 2007 and the Branch Rickey Award in 2009, which rewards excellence in charity work.
