

Rawlings 2013 All-Defensive Teams

It's the oldest cliché in sports: Defense wins championships. The importance of good fundamental defense is preached by coaches all over the world at any level of every sport. So when young athletes show that they have taken those lessons to heart and execute nearly flawless defense on the field, they deserve to be rewarded.

Ten players from each World Series tournament are selected to receive an All-Defensive Team Award. One player from each position plus a utility player will be honored with the little league version of Major League Baseball's Gold Glove Award.

Selection of the award recipients is decided by votes of all press box personnel including: media reporters, scorekeepers, scoreboard operators and announcers. The final decision will be made by the press box coordinator.

Factors to take into consideration when voting for the All-Defensive teams include:

- Fielding Percentage
- Number of Putouts
- Teamwork exhibited when fielding the position
- Sportsmanship exhibited when fielding the position
- Knowledge of game and strategy exhibited when fielding the position
- Hustle exhibited when fielding the position

These player exhibited exceptional defensive skills and met all of the criteria stated above.
